

THE HONEYCLUB

Issue 01 2020

If I Only Had Money

*Almost an Interview with bass player
Bo J. Al*

I wanna be in the Laboratory

*Untold stories about unforgettable nights
Feety Joe*

I`ve got a secret

*10 secret tricks to make the best
out of your Tinder Date
Gee Lou*

D€5,80 // A€8,50
CHsfr12,30
B,NL,LUX€7,80

7793-42807

ALMOST AN INTERVIEW.

According to recent studies, about 73% of musicians, professionals and amateurs alike, seem to have troubles with their bank account balances. Data shows that depending on the genre of music a musician is devoted to, there seem to be vast differences in their spendings and ways into bankruptcy.

We tried to meet with bass player Bo J. Al to get an exclusive inside view at the spendings of a real Rockstar. We scheduled a meeting at the famous Waldorf-Astoria, but unfortunately Bo J. Al didn't show up. After various intense phone conversations with his management, they sent us a list of Bo J's total spendings in the first week of December (2nd to 8th) 2019, which grants us an idea of Bo J. Al's lifestyle and finances.

The list included such striking notes as 4377€ losses in horse-racing bets, 1411€ spendings on (mostly alcoholic) beverages, a transaction of 3400€ to an anonymous woman in Oxfordshire, England and an investment of 1600€ into a start-up manufacturing robotic cleaning devices.

The all-in-all one week spending of Bo J. Al adds up to approximately 13,425€.

His management assured us that, even though he does lead an excessive lifestyle, that week's spendings were extraordinarily high. On further investigation on the anonymous woman from England, we were told that there would be no further comment, except that Bo J. "occasionally pays higher amounts of money to people that prefer to remain anonymous all over the world, for different reasons."

Now, we can only speculate about Mr. Al's incognito donations, but we like to keep in mind, that this money was given away by the man who once most famously wrote the suspicious lyrics "If I only had money / I would buy love, love, love."

If I only had money

BO J. AL

I wanna be in the laboratory

FEETY JOE

UNTOLD STORIES.

As you may or may not know, the Honeyclub has coined the term „laboratory“ to describe their excissve lifestyle of Sex, Drugs and Rock `n Roll. We met up with Feety Joe, drummer to the Club and he shared with us one of his most exciting Laboratory-stories.

„Two years ago we played a couple of shows in Los Angeles. After the last show we decided to drive up to Calabasas, where David Hasselhoff threw a party at his mansion. We got wicked drunk – we literally binged Tequila – but then we got kicked out, because I got in a fight with David over a hamburger. Lou had snuck some coke from Johnny Galecki, we snorted the shit out of it, hijacked a car and I drove us back to Santa Monica. We might have killed a road-crossing chicken on the way. I vaguely remember some police trouble, but they only took Lou with them, because he tried to piss at their police car.

Al and I went on to walk down late-night L.A. streets, still extraoridnarily shitfaced. Then I lost control over my balance and took a fall over a fence, where I ripped my thumb so bad, that I had to be hospitalized. You can still see a scar on my thumb’s nail.

The doctor gave me some serious painkillers, so I didn’t see a reason to stay at the hospital all night. We escaped back on the streets, where soon we were recognized by three japanese girls, who invited us to their apartment to drop some acid. And so we did. Now the last thing I remember is Al getting into some kind of orgy action with the girls and from there on it’s full blackout.

I woke up two days later in a backyard shack in Bakersfield with cigarettes neatly arranged between my toes and a little moustache that must have grown in those few days somehow. I kept it ever since. Our departure from the states was delayed by three days.

That was full-on laboratory.

10 SECRET TRICKS

to make the best out of your Tinder Date

Gee Lou has been known to be the band's keeper of secrets, knowing almost everything, telling almost nothing. But for this issue of The Honeyclub Magazine he made an exception and shared with us his secrets of love, precisley his 10 best dating advices

1. Smoke as much as you can

Smoking a lot shows that you are in a good physical condition, it's elegant and charming, it proofs you have a good sense of style and you sure will be the coolest cat in the place.

2. Drink heavily

If they don't want you drunk, you don't want them.

3. Don't listen

As long as you don't listen to what your date says, you will be surprised by the exciting stories of your date over and over again. So when your date will tell you their favourite anecdote for the 10th time, you can still show excitement and act naturally without any effort.

4. Let your date pay for you

Just don't bring any money at all. If you think you're worth it – you're worth it!

5. Talk about your Exes

Let them know what they are dealing with.

6. Remember your date's name

Seriously, I can't stress this enough. I can tell you it's a shitload of work to find out later without asking. (If you still forget, check for passports, credit cards etc. while they're not looking)

7. Correct your date's mistakes

Is your date misspelling certain words or having trouble with grammar? Correct them! They will be fond of your intelligence.

8. Make out in public

If things are getting serious – show everyone. You will gain your communities respect within no time and your date will be impressed with your bravery.

9. Build a connection

A connection can easily be established by stealing something important from them (e.g. glasses) so they will have to meet you again to get their stuff back

10. Keep a secret

I've got a secret

GEELOU